

The image shows the front cover of a book. The cover is dark brown with a textured, possibly leather or cloth, surface. It features a simple rectangular border in a slightly lighter shade of brown. The title is printed in a gold or light brown serif font, centered on the cover. The title is arranged in five lines: 'THE', 'FATHER,', 'AND THE', 'BROKEN', and 'SONS'.

THE FATHER, AND THE BROKEN
SONS

Dedication

To the sons who have longed for a fathers love.

To the fathers who longed for the children they lost.

To the hearts of men which have been mocked by the Devil's hate.

I AM !

“Arise, you sleeper! Rise up from your coffin and the Anointed One will shine his light into you!”

-Ephesians 5:14 (TPT)

Copyright © 2025 Kristy Moore | Nathaniel Nevedal

All rights reserved.

No part of this publication may be reproduced, distributed, or transmitted in any form or by any means, including photocopying, recording, or other electronic or mechanical methods, without the prior written permission of the author, except in the case of brief quotations embodied in critical reviews and certain other noncommercial uses permitted by copyright law.

Scripture quotations are taken from the Holy Bible, New International Version® (NIV®), unless otherwise noted.

Copyright © 1973, 1978, 1984, 2011 by Biblica. Inc. TM

Used by permission. All rights reserved worldwide.

Published by:

Publisher name

Author: Kristy Moore, Nathaniel Nevedal

Title: The Father, and The Broken Sons

PART ONE: Jesus Speaks — Rise with Courage

Jesus Speaks: Rise with Courage

My son, it's time to rise.

There's power in you you haven't even touched yet.

There's fire in your chest, strength in your bones, and purpose in your blood.

You've been through hell—and you survived.

That wasn't weakness. That was war.

And now I'm calling you out of the shadows.

Not to perform.

Not to impress.

But to stand.

You don't need to be perfect.

You don't need to have it all figured out.

You just need to be willing.

There's a version of you the enemy is terrified of.

The version that walks in courage.

The version that refuses to bow to shame.

The version that hears My voice louder than his past.

That man is already inside you.

You don't have to earn him.

You just have to wake him up.

So rise.

Even if your hands shake.

Even if your heart still aches.

Even if your past whispers lies.

Because I've seen the end of your story

And your not a loser.

Guided Visualization: The War Book

I want you to picture this:

You're in a quiet space somewhere private, untouched by noise.

No distractions. No pressure. Just you and Me.

In front of you sits a worn, leather-bound book.

This is your war book, the one only you can write.

The one that holds everything you've seen. Everything you've carried.

You open it.

The pages are thick. Blank. Waiting.

Not for perfection. Not for poetry.

For truth.

I sit across from you, calm, unshaken.

There's no judgment in My face.

Only fire. Loyalty. Strength.

You pick up the pen. It feels heavy in your hand.

Because truth has weight.

But I'm not asking you to write it alone.

I'm here.

Write the first sentence.

Say what happened.

Not to be exposed, but to be freed.

I'm not shocked by anything you say.

I was there when it happened.

I never left.

This war book is where you reclaim your voice.

This is where the silence ends.

And this is where we begin.

Checkpoint: Courage in the Fire

1. List at least 7 conflicts in your life where you feel unheard.

Let Me show you how strength rises in surrender.

a. _____

b. _____

c. _____

d. _____

e. _____

f. _____

g. _____

“But He said to me, ‘My grace is sufficient for you, for My power is made perfect in weakness.’ Therefore I will boast all the more gladly about my weaknesses, so that Christ’s power may rest on me.” – 2 Corinthians 12:9

2. What would it feel like for loved ones to stop surviving and accept your leadership? List the differences you would feel and see in yourself.

a. _____

-
-
3. How can your courage create a legacy? List both past and present legacy changes you see in your life as well as others if courage was foraged.

a. _____

“Be strong and courageous. Do not be afraid; do not be discouraged, for the Lord your God will be with you wherever you go.” – Joshua 1:9

4. What lies about yourself convince you that you are not strong? Name the lies. I’m here to break it.

a. _____
b. _____
c. _____
d. _____
e. _____
f. _____
g. _____

“The thief comes only to steal and kill and destroy; I have come that they may have life, and have it to the full.” – John 10:10

5. You know of Christ-like courage, what courage are you going to walk in? (Warrior courage, Father courage, Identity courage, etc.) List your areas of courage you are going to commit to change.

a. _____
b. _____
c. _____
d. _____
e. _____
f. _____
g. _____

“Wait for the Lord; be strong and take heart and wait for the Lord.” – Psalm 27:14

6. Describe from your heart what kind of man do you see YOURSELF as?
Close your eyes. Listen. Allow Jesus's words to show you. Write down what you hear?

a. _____

“The Lord your God is with you, the Mighty Warrior who saves. He will take great delight in you; in His love He will no longer rebuke you, but will rejoice over you with singing.”

– Zephaniah 3:17

Me to Me

You were never weak.

You were wounded.

But you didn't quit.

That's what makes you dangerous to the enemy.

You kept standing.

And now—

I'm renewing something new inside you.

You don't have to do this alone.

You never did.

Together, we're building a man of fire.

Of faith.

Of courage.

You're not becoming someone else.

You're becoming who you've always been.

My image bearer, my son, my beloved.

Guided Prayer: Jesus, Make Me Brave

Jesus,

I want to know what it means to walk in strength.

Not as an imposter. Not in silence or anger.

Real courage, the kind that stands when others fall.

Teach me what it means to be a man who fights with unconditional love,

Who protects with fire,

And who walks without shame.

I give You my fear,

And I ask You to fill me with holy courage.

The man that builds legacy.

The man that breaks chains.

The man that lifts up others.

I'm ready to rise.

Amen.

Scripture Meditation: Courage for the Rise

2 Corinthians 12:9

"My grace is sufficient for you, for My power is made perfect in weakness."

Joshua 1:9

"Be strong and courageous. Do not be afraid; do not be discouraged, for the Lord your God will be with you wherever you go."

John 10:10

"The thief comes only to steal and kill and destroy; I have come that they may have life, and have it to the full."

Psalms 27:14

"Wait for the Lord; be strong and take heart and wait for the Lord."

Zephaniah 3:17

"The Lord your God is with you, the Mighty Warrior who saves. He will take great delight in you; in His love He will no longer rebuke you, but will rejoice over you with singing."

PART TWO: The Courage to Thrive

Jesus Speaks: From Survival to Life

My son, I see how hard you've fought to survive.

You didn't ask for the pain. Actions can choose you to be the bad guy.

But you kept going even when everything inside you wanted to shut down.

That wasn't weakness. That was courage.

This is a calling that has been deep inside you.

Survival was necessary for a time. But I did not create you to live with clenched fists and your burning red eyes.

I came so you could live.

I came to remind you how alive you are.

Thriving will feel unfamiliar. It might even feel shameful at first.

Son, as I commanded you must love yourself just as I have loved you. So you can love another.

Son, you cannot lead if you hide.

You don't have to keep planing for the next letdown.

You can rest your soul.

It will take courage, I know.

Courage to stop running.

Courage to stop hiding.

Courage to stop performing.

But I promise you this: I promise you will never be alone. And I will never leave you even when others do.

The very places that train you to survive can become the places where you thrive.

You can still honor what kept you alive, but it's time to let Me teach you how to thrive.

Guided Visualization: The Courage to Thrive

You find yourself taking a heavy rucksack off your back.

The weight of it nearly knocks the wind out of you.

It's been there so long, you forgot what it felt like to stand without it.

You unzip the pack and begin to pull out bricks.

You don't analyze them. You don't need to.

You already know what they are.

Fresh pain.

New betrayals.

Old wounds finally rising to the surface.

Unspoken anger.

Disappointments you tried to bury.

Moments that shattered something inside you.

One by one, you lay the bricks at your feet.

Not to discard them — but to build something with them.

You start stacking them into a staircase.

Downward.

Deeper.

Further into the ground.

You don't ask why.

Something in you just knows:

This is how it's always been.

You place the last brick and pause to catch your breath.

Then, slowly, you begin to descend.

As you walk down, the air grows heavier.

The light starts to fade.

And memories start appearing — not like a slideshow, but like flickers of places you've already been.

They aren't labeled.

But your heart remembers them.

Shane getting laid off because you didn't take the risk.

The anger that you always end up back here.

The time you forgot your kid's game — the way their eyes dropped when they realized.

A face turning away.

A door that never opened.

Feeling of resentment from everyone who hurt you.

A whispered insult you still carry.

You pass massive boulders along the walls.

They hum with pain as you walk by.

These are the experiences too heavy to carry...

So your mind carved out places to hold them.

You don't touch them.

But you feel them.

Some pulse with rage.

Others radiate silence so deep, it scares you.

Some feel like absolutely nothing — and that kind of numbness is its own kind of hell.

You keep walking, past heavy locked doors built into the stone.

You don't know what's behind them.

But your chest tightens as you pass.

The staircase keeps winding downward.

The deeper you go, the less you remember the surface.

And a thought creeps in:

Have I ever really left this place?

It feels like this might be your home — but not in a comforting way.

More like a trap you've always been in... but can never quite name.

What you don't realize — not yet — is that there's a part of you whose only job has been to build these stairs.

To keep placing bricks.

To keep going deeper.

And that part is still here... stuck in these depths.

But you don't know that yet.

Not fully.

It all just feels... familiar.

Confusing.

And deeply lonely.

Eventually, after what feels like days, you reach the bottom.

There it is.

The bunker door.

Heavy. Steel. Sealed shut.

Not just a door — a symbol.

Of survival.

Of hiding.

Of everything you did to keep going... even when it broke you.

You kneel.

Reach into the last pocket of your rucksack.

There, you find the leather-bound book.

And in the other hand, a key.

As you kneel in front of the door, gripping the book in one hand and the key in the other,

something shifts in the silence.

A whisper.

Faint. Gentle. Steady.

“You were never alone.

I was with you, even here.

You just didn’t know it.”

Checkpoint: The Shift to Thriving

Ask Me these questions. I will answer you.

1. Jesus, in what ways is my spirit still not thriving? As a companion? As a father? As a son? As a friend? Even in my thoughts? Write down where you see yourself thriving in each of these areas.

a.

“Why are you cast down, O my soul, and why are you disquieted within me?
Hope in God, for I shall yet praise Him.” – Psalm 42:11

2. Jesus, what would it look like for me to truly thrive instead of just survive? Describe.

[illegible]

“The righteous shall flourish like a palm tree, he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon.”

– Psalm 92:12

3. What thought patterns, relationships, or fears are keeping me in survival mode?

[illegible]

“Do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind.” – Romans 12:2

4. What part of me still believes thriving is dangerous, selfish, or unrealistic? List these beliefs of yourself.

a. _____

“For God has not given us a spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind.”

– 2 Timothy 1:7

5. Ask Jesus, what strengths do You want to give me today so I can step into a life of thriving?

a. _____

“Be strong and courageous. Do not be afraid or terrified, for the Lord your God goes with you. He will never leave you nor forsake you.” – Deuteronomy 31:6

6. What would you say to the part of you building the staircase?

a. _____

“My brethren, count it all joy when you fall into various trials, knowing that the testing of your faith produces patience. But let patience have its perfect work, that you may be perfect and complete, lacking nothing.” – James 1:2-4

Me to Me

You carried that rucksack for so long it became your shape,

each brick pressed into your bones,

every step a small act of survival.

I see the places you hid the hurts,

the rooms you built to keep breathing, and I thank you for the cleverness that kept us alive.

You do not have to keep doing this alone, not now, not ever, even if your hands learned the work before help arrived.

Lay the bricks down with me, one at a time, not to forget them, but to build a new way out.

I will hold the key,

I will hold the book,

I will stay when the light feels strange, and I will keep you safe while you learn how to stand.

Come back slowly,

come back honest,

you are worthy of a life that does not require hiding.

Guided Prayer: Jesus, Teach Me to Thrive

Jesus,

You see the places where I'm still surviving.

You know the weight I've carried, and how long I've carried it.

I want to live, but I don't always know how.

I want to give you my bricks to build something new.

Teach me to trust You.

Teach me to rest.

Give me the courage to walk into thriving, even if it feels unfamiliar.

Let me feel You beside me with every step.

In You, I have all I need.

Amen.

Scripture Meditation: Life More Abundant

John 10:10

"I have come that they may have life, and that they may have it more abundantly."

Psalms 42:11

"Why are you cast down, O my soul, and why are you disquieted within me? Hope in God, for I shall yet praise Him."

Psalm 92:12

“The righteous shall flourish like a palm tree, he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon.”

Romans 12:2

“Do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind.”

2 Timothy 1:7

“For God has not given us a spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind.”

Deuteronomy 31:6

“Be strong and courageous. Do not be afraid or terrified, for the Lord your God goes with you. He will never leave you nor forsake you.”

PART THREE: The Broken Son

Jesus Speaks: I See the Boy

There's a boy still inside every man — a boy who had to learn how to protect himself.

He learned how to shut down. How to toughen up. How to disappear behind a mask that looked stronger than he felt.

He found ways to keep going. And it worked. He survived.

But the very strategies that kept the boy alive often become the walls that keep the man stuck.

And sometimes, without even realizing it, the man forgets who he used to be.

He forgets why the walls were built.

He forgets that behind them, a boy is still waiting to be seen.

You weren't broken because you hardened.

You were surviving the only way you knew how.

But survival is not the same as healing.

And healing begins when you pause long enough to ask a new question:

What if I don't have to carry this alone anymore?

What if there's more strength in facing what I buried than in pretending it didn't exist?

What if Jesus never stopped seeing the boy inside — not as weak or needy — but as brave?

This part of you isn't in the way.

It's not a threat.

It's the key.

Not to weakness, but to wholeness.

You don't have to take every wall down today.

But you can start by walking toward the places you once avoided — and you don't have to do it alone.

Because this isn't just about you.

This pain didn't start with you — but the healing can.

The curse may have run through your bloodline for generations, but Jesus is standing at the edge of it now — waiting for the son who will break it.

“The Lord is close to the brokenhearted and saves those who are crushed in spirit.”

– Psalm 34:18

Guided Visualization: The Bunker

Your hand tightens around the cold key.

You stand before the heavy steel door — heart pounding, breath shallow.

And then...

You turn the key.

The lock groans.

Something ancient shifts.

The door doesn't swing open — it heaves like it's been sealed for decades.

Dust spills out as it creaks inward.

You step across the threshold.

It's dark.

It smells like rust, silence, and memory.

You know this place.

Not with your mind — but with your bones.

You've been here before.

Even if you couldn't remember.

You walk forward slowly, cautiously.

Your boots scrape against the ground.

The air is still and thick — like time has been sitting here, untouched.

And then you notice it.

The bricks.

They're older.

Weathered.

Worn.

Not like the ones you just lay on the stairs.

These aren't yours.

They're deeper than your pain.

Older than your memories.

You run your hand along the wall.

These bricks have memories carved faintly into them — but not yours.

Not yet.

This place wasn't just made by you.

It was inherited.

You glance to your right — and your breath catches.

A keychain, hanging on a rusty nail.

Familiar.

Too familiar.

It's your father's.

You'd recognize that old sports team logo anywhere — the one he carried every day, the one he dropped on the counter every night when he got home.

But what's it doing here?

You walk farther in.

On the table, a toolbox.

Lid open, hinges cracked.

Inside, a mess of broken tools.

You lift one gently.

Your grandfather's initials are carved into the handle.

You remember those hands — weathered, strong, always busy.

This was his.

This whole place... was his.

And your father's.

And now — yours.

Your eyes catch in the corner of the floor something shiny.

You reach down and you pull up old, weathered belt.

You examine the belt, find your last name carved in the inside.

Memories of the belt begin to flood through you.

Before you can feel them you drop it, kick it back to the corner.

You don't understand it yet.

Not fully.

But something in you knows:

This bunker runs deeper than your own story.

It was built over generations.

Brick by brick.

Wound by wound.

Passed down like an inheritance no one wanted, but everyone carried.

And now, you're standing in it.

The weight of it hits you.

Not just the grief you've known — but the grief that lived before you were even born.

You move further into the bunker, your footsteps echoing off the old stone walls.

Something glints on a table just ahead.

You approach slowly.

It's a large sheet — weathered, curled at the corners, yellowed with age.

Blueprints.

Not of a building... but of the bunker.

The layout sprawls across the table — tunnels, rooms, doors, winding deep into the earth.

It's far bigger than you ever imagined.

Your eyes scan the page — and then you see it:

Black voids.

Dark, jagged shapes scattered across the map like burns.

Like something infected and alive.

Your name is printed above one of the black spots.

Not etched neatly — but scrawled, like a warning.

You look again and notice others.

Your father's name.

Your grandfather's.

Names you don't even recognize.

Whole bloodlines mapped out in broken spaces.

Generations of silence.

Wounds too big to name.

Pain that never got healed — only passed down.

You press your hand over your name, and it almost stings.

The page feels hot.

Your finger traces the path — following the tunnels on the map until you reach the place marked with your name.

Under your feet you stand at the edge of a black hole.

A hollow circle in the ground.

And you know.

This is your place.

The part of the bunker, only you can enter.

You step closer to the edge.

You feel the pull of it.

The weight.

The fear.

And then— you feel something behind you.

You turn—

But there's no one there.

Just a whisper that isn't spoken:

You're ready.

And before you can respond— you fall.

Not violently.

Not brutally.

But intentionally.

Like something was waiting for you to surrender.

The world shifts.

You tumble down into your pit.

Deeper than before.

The air grows colder.

Your body tenses.

Your heart races.

You land in the dirt with a dull thud.

It's dark.

Still.

You don't know how long you've been here.

Time feels like a dream — like maybe you've been here before... maybe hundreds of times... maybe never.

Your hands sink into the earth.

The soil is cold.

Wet in places.

It clings to your skin like memory.

You try to get your bearings, but it's hard to breathe.

Your chest is tight.

Your mind loud.

The silence screams louder than any noise.

You sit up slowly, wiping dust from your palms, and your eyes begin to adjust.

You're not in a room.

You're in a pit — a deep one.

And around the edges of the pit... are tools.

Not new.

Not clean.

Not sharp.

They're worn.

Broken.

Bent.

You crawl toward them, one by one, trying to remember how they got here.

A rusted shovel with a cracked handle.

A pickaxe chipped and dull.

A drill, lifeless and stripped of power.

A crowbar that's warped, useless.

A bouquet of dried-up flowers, long dead — the kind you remember holding once, when you thought love could fix what pain had built.

You touch each one like a relic.

Like a grave marker.

Because that's what they are.

These were your tools.

The ones you used when you were trying to climb out.

Trying to make sense of the dark.

Trying to fix what never felt whole.

Each one is a memory of effort.

Of trying harder.

Of doing more.

Of surviving.

But now?

Now they're useless.

So you do the only thing you can think to do.

You dig.

With your hands.

Fingernails tearing.

Knuckles bleeding.

Breath shallow.

Mind racing.

You dig because somewhere deep inside, you believe the only way out is down.

That if you just keep going...

If you dig a little further...

Maybe you'll find the end.

Maybe you'll break through.

Maybe you'll escape.

But the more you dig, the tighter the walls feel.

The more the earth closes in.

The more the silence turns into noise.

Inside your chest — the pounding.

Inside your mind — the screaming.

And you realize...

You're not just tired.

You are undone.

But your hands won't stop.

Your body keeps moving.

Because this is all you've ever known.

Work harder.

Dig deeper.

Survive longer.

You weren't taught how to climb out.

You were taught how to endure.

And that's exactly what you're doing.

Until everything breaks.

Your hands.

Your will.

Your strength.

And for the first time...

You stop.

Not because you want to.

Because you can't keep going.

You collapse into the dirt.

Still breathing.

But just barely.

And that's when — in the deafening silence of your collapse —

You hear it.

A whisper.

You were never alone...

It doesn't echo.

It doesn't thunder.

But somehow, it cuts through everything.

Like it was always there...

and you're only now beginning to listen.

Your breath catches.

Your eyes shift.

And that's when you see it.

The golden shovel.

Lying just beside you in the dirt.

It wasn't there before.

Or maybe it was.

Maybe it's always been there.

You reach for it slowly, your fingers brushing the handle.

It's warm.

Alive.

And then the voice speaks again.

Stronger this time.

Steady.

Not from above you.

Not from around you.

From within you.

I've been here the whole time.

You just couldn't hear Me.

And then, with unmistakable love:

We can keep digging to nowhere...

Or you can put your trust in Me...

and allow Me to help you truly live.

You freeze.

Something in you breaks.

He doesn't demand.

He doesn't shame.

He invites.

So gently, so powerfully.

The whisper turns again:

So... do we keep digging?

Or are you done trying to do this without Me?

I'll wait here and dig for as long as it takes...

But you don't have to stay buried to be safe anymore.

You look around one last time.

At the broken tools.

At the walls you've clawed into.

At the weight of it all.

Then you reach for the golden shovel.

Your fingers wrap around it.

And your hands stop trembling.

You grip the golden shovel.

And suddenly—it begins to glow.

Not like a flashlight.

Not like something manmade.

But with a holy fire.

It doesn't burn your skin.

It doesn't scorch the earth.

But it radiates warmth... and light.

The darkness recoils.

The shadows pull back.

And for the first time since you fell into this pit, you can see.

There, half-buried in the dirt in front of you...

is a stone.

It's massive.

Smooth.

Cold to the touch.

“So I kneel humbly in awe before the Father of our Lord Jesus, the Messiah, the perfect Father of every father and child in heaven and on the earth. And I pray that He would unveil within you the unlimited riches of His glory and favor until supernatural strength floods your innermost being with His divine might and explosive power. Then, by constantly using your faith, the life of Christ will be released deep inside you and the resting place of His love will become the very source and root of your life. Then you will be empowered to discover what every holy one experiences—the great magnitude of the astonishing love of Christ in all its dimensions.” -- Ephesians 3:14–20 TPT

How deeply intimate and far-reaching is His love!

How enduring and inclusive it is!

Endless love beyond measurement that transcends our understanding—this extravagant love pours into you until you are filled to overflowing with the fullness of God!

Another whisper — clearer this time.

“We can keep digging... or you can put your trust in Me.”

You raise the golden shovel.

Strike.

A tiny beam of light shoots out from your chest —just a flicker.

A crack in the wall you didn’t know was there.

You strike again.

And again.

With every hit, the scripture presses deeper into your soul.

Light pours out of you —brighter. Hotter.

Each blow breaks another lie.

“Too broken.”

“Not enough.”

“Always alone.”

“Never going to change.”

Gone.

The stone shatters.

And suddenly...

You are burning.

Not with rage.

Not with fear.

With fire.

The fire of the Lord.

His light bursts from your chest, filling the pit, filling the bunker, filling every place that was always dark.

And that's when you see him.

In the far corner, covered in dust,

crouched low behind a wall of rubble.

His face is smeared with dirt.

His knees scraped raw.

His hands clenched into fists.

He's hiding.

Trembling.

Wild-eyed.

Like even light might hurt him.

But it doesn't.

The light wraps around him — gentle, soft, unrelenting.

You step closer.

Your breath catches.

It's not just a boy.

It's you.

The child you were.

The one who first tasted fear and thought it was normal.

The one who was told to toughen up, stay silent, act fine.

The one who didn't know what else to do — so he built a bunker and never came back out.

He sees you now — the man you've become.

And something in him softens.

You kneel.

Hold out your hand.

Your voice shakes.

"You're safe now.

I've come back for you.

I didn't forget you.

And I'm never leaving you behind again."

His lip trembles.

He puts his tiny hand in yours.

And you lift him up.

Out of hiding.

Out of fear.

Out of the place he thought he'd stay forever.

You turn toward Jesus.

He's standing there.

Arms wide open.

And as you step into His embrace — with the boy in your arms — you breathe for the first time in years.

He holds you both.

And whispers:

"Now, My son...

Healing can begin."

Jesus' arms are still wrapped around you — strong, warm, unmoving.

The little boy clings to your chest,

his heartbeat fast,

his breath short.

He hasn't let go.

And you don't want him to.

But then — he shifts in your arms.

Just slightly.

And he looks up at you.

His eyes are wide.

Searching.

Terrified.

He opens his mouth to speak...

But nothing comes out.

You lower your head, gently press your forehead to his,

and whisper:

"You can say it."

He hesitates.

Then barely louder than a breath — like he's scared the words might break him —

he whispers:

"I'm scared you're going to put me back here..."

The silence that follows is heavier than anything you've carried.

Because somewhere inside...

you wonder the same thing.

What if you leave him?

What if this moment fades?

What if, when life gets loud again, you forget?

What if he becomes invisible again?

You swallow hard.

Tears rise.

But this time, you don't push them down.

You let them fall.

You hold his face in your hands and look him straight in the eyes.

Your voice is raw, but unwavering: I AM not leaving you here.

Not ever again.

You don't have to hide anymore.

You don't have to carry the pain alone.

You're not a problem to fix.

You're a part of me to love."

The boy's lip quivers.

He wants to believe you.

So you keep going.

"I know why you stayed.

I know what you were protecting me from.

I honor your strength.

But you don't have to protect me that way anymore.

We're safe now."

You feel him exhaling against your chest.

His body softens.

His shoulders dropped.

And he lets out a sound —

half-sob, half-sigh

the kind of sound that only comes when a child realizes he doesn't have to be brave anymore.

Jesus kneels beside you both.

He places His hand on your back.

Then on the boy's.

You feel warmth radiate through your spine.

Not heat that burns light that heals.

Jesus looks into your eyes and says:

*"This part of you matters deeply to Me.

I've watched him wait.

I've seen every tear.

I've counted every minute.

You are whole — not when you ignore your brokenness...

But when you bring every part to Me.

He places His hand on your heart.

The boy rests his head on your chest.

And Jesus says:

“You came back for him...

But I never left.”

Checkpoint: Meeting the Broken Son

1. What walls did I build as a boy to protect myself? What actions are walls?

- a. _____

“The Lord is close to the brokenhearted and saves those who are crushed in spirit.” – Psalm 34:18

2. How have those same walls kept me stuck as a man? Reflect and write.

- a. _____

“Though I walk in the midst of trouble, you preserve my life. You stretch out your hand against the anger of my foes; with your right hand you save me.” – Psalm 138:7

3. What would it mean to stop surviving and start healing? Reflect the difference.

- a. _____

“He heals the brokenhearted and binds up their wounds.” – Psalm 147:3

4. What part of me is still in hiding? Give them a name and describe how they hide.

- a. _____
b. _____
c. _____
d. _____
e. _____

“You are my hiding place; you will protect me from trouble and surround me with songs of deliverance.” – Psalm 32:7

5. What would it mean for me to say, ‘It ends with me’?

- a. _____

“So if the Son sets you free, you will be free indeed.” – John 8:36

Me to Me – Rally Verse:

“When I am afraid, I put my trust in you.” – Psalm 56:3

Me to Me

I will not leave you in the dark.

I will not silence your cry.

I will not call you weak for surviving.

You were strong when no one saw.

You protected me when no one else could.

You carried pain I wasn't ready to face.

But you don't have to carry it alone anymore.

You don't have to keep digging.

You don't have to hide.

I honor your strength.

But now — I will fight for you.

I will walk with you.

I will love you.

I will bring you into the light.

You are not my burden.

You are my brother.

You are my son.

You are my heart.

And I will never leave you behind again.

Jesus Speaks: Wholeness in Me

This part of you matters deeply to Me.

I've watched him wait.

I've seen every tear.

I've counted every minute.

You are whole — not when you ignore your brokenness...

But when you bring every part to Me.

You came back for him...

But I never left.

Guided Prayer: Jesus, Heal My Broken Son

Jesus,

You see the boy inside me —

the one who learned to hide, the one who carried what I could not carry.

I thank You for his strength, but I no longer want to live divided.

Bring him into the light.

Wrap him in Your arms.

Heal the wounds I buried.

Teach me to walk as one whole man — with nothing hidden, nothing silenced,

nothing lost.

I want to be the man who honors the boy.

I want to be the man who carries Your Spirit.

I want to be the man who lives free.

I give You my broken son.

I give You my whole self.

Amen.

Scripture Meditation: Wholeness and Healing

Psalms 34:18

“The Lord is close to the brokenhearted and saves those who are crushed in spirit.”

Ephesians 2:19–20

“You are no longer foreigners and strangers, but fellow citizens with God’s people and also members of His household, built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, with Christ Jesus himself as the chief cornerstone.”

Ephesians 3:14–20 (TPT)

So I kneel humbly in awe before the Father of our Lord Jesus, the Messiah, the perfect Father of every father and child in heaven and on the earth. And I pray that He would unveil within you the unlimited riches of His glory and favor until supernatural strength floods your innermost being with His divine might and explosive power. Then, by constantly using your faith, the life of Christ will be released deep inside you, and the resting place of His love will become the very source and root of your life. Then you will be empowered to discover what every holy one experiences—the great magnitude of the astonishing love of Christ in all its dimensions. How deeply intimate and far-reaching is His love! How enduring and inclusive it is! Endless love beyond measurement that transcends our understanding—this extravagant love pours into you until you are filled to overflowing with the fullness of God!

PART FOUR: The Restored Man

Guided Visualization: The Ascent

You are still in the pit.

The boy is pressed against your chest.

Jesus kneels beside you, His arm steady across your back.

You are tired.

Weary.

Hands raw from digging.

Heart heavy from carrying more than you thought you could.

But Jesus doesn't rush you.

He waits.

Until you lift your eyes and meet His.

Then, in His voice — strong, unwavering, unshaken — He says:

"It's time to rise."

He reaches down, grips your arm, and pulls you to your feet.

The boy clings to you tighter.

And with your other arm, you hold him close.

Together, the three of you face the stairs.

The climb looks impossible.

Steep.

Dark.

Endless.

Your knees ache just staring at it.

Every step feels like a weight pressing against your chest.

But Jesus nods.

And you begin.

The first steps are slow.

Heavy.

Voices rise from the shadows — familiar lies, echoing like chains.

“You’ll fail.”

“You’ll never change.”

“You’re not enough.”

“They’ll see you for who you really are.”

Each word cuts.

Your foot slips.

But Jesus grips your arm tighter.

“Speak,” He says.

You open your mouth — shaky at first.

But you find the words:

“I am not forsaken.”

“I am His son.”

“I am strong in the Lord.”

“I will not turn back.”

With every declaration, the boy presses closer to your chest, listening.

Then — like a whisper at first — he repeats after you.

Your words become his.

And the darkness grows quieter.

Halfway up, your legs feel like stone.

You want to drop.

To turn back.

But Jesus places His hand against your back.

Warmth surges through your spine.

The Holy Spirit fills your lungs like fire and wind.

Strength you didn't know you had rises in your bones.

Your steps grow steadier.

Your breath stronger.

Your voice louder.

And then — you notice it.

Hanging on the wall beside the staircase:

a breastplate.

A shield.

A sword.

A helmet.

Each piece glowing faintly in the dark.

You stop.

Jesus nods.

"These are yours."

You set the boy gently on the stairs beside you.

He watches, eyes wide, as you lift the breastplate and fasten it to your chest.

It fits — not like borrowed armor, but like it was forged for you.

“Father,” Jesus says.

“That’s who you are.”

You take the shield into your hand.

It feels solid.

Weighty.

Unshakable.

“Husband,” Jesus says.

“The one who protects.”

Next, you lift the helmet and place it on your head.

As it settles, your mind clears.

The lies fall silent.

“Leader,” Jesus says.

“Think with My truth. Walk with My wisdom.”

Finally, you take the sword.

It burns with light in your hand.

“Warrior,” Jesus says.

“Not against flesh and blood, but against the enemy who tried to destroy you. You were made for this fight.”

You glance down.

The boy is smiling for the first time.

Because he sees it now — not just the broken man, but the restored one.

You scoop him up again.

Armor on.

Sword in hand.

Shield steady.

Step by step, you climb higher.

The air grows lighter.

The wind brushes against your face.

You can almost see the surface.

Almost.

But Jesus stops you.

His hand on your chest.

“Not yet,” He says.

“Feel this moment. Remember it.

This is where the man rises.”

And there — in the half-light of the staircase — you stand.

Not just with Jesus.

Not just with the boy.

But with the man you were always meant to be.

Checkpoint: Rise in Your Role

Jesus has called you up the stairs. You are not climbing as the broken boy anymore — you are climbing as the restored man. Take time to reflect honestly on who you are becoming.

1. Son

- What does the boy inside you still need from you now? Reflect and write.

- ---

- How can you father, protect, and guide that part of you with strength and compassion? List steps and actions you will take.

1.

2.

3.

4.

5.

6.

7.

- [illegible]

"I will be a Father to you, and you will be My sons and daughters, says the Lord Almighty."

– 2 Corinthians 6:18

2. Brother

- When Jesus called you to carry the shield, He named you protector. Who around you needs your strength, your encouragement, your presence?

- ---

- How have you pulled away out of fear, shame, or silence? Describe your action(s)

- In fear...

- In shame...

- In silence....

- What would it look like to show up for the people in your circle — as a brother, a friend, a man who covers and protects?

- As a brother...

- As a friend...

- As a man...

- As a husband...

Scripture Anchor:

“Carry each other’s burdens, and in this way you will fulfill the law of Christ.”

– Galatians 6:2

3. Leader

- When the helmet of truth settled on your head, lies fell away. What false beliefs have shaped your choices as a man?

- _____
- _____
- _____
- _____
- _____
- _____
- _____

- Where is God calling you to lead — in your home, your work, your community, your faith?

- In the home...

- _____
 - _____
 - _____

- At your work...

- _____
 - _____
 - _____

- In your community...

- _____
 - _____
 - _____

- In your faith...

- _____
 - _____
 - _____

- What would leadership look like if it was rooted in humility, courage, and presence instead of performance?

- In humility...

- In courage...

- In presence...

Scripture Anchor:

“Do nothing out of selfish ambition or vain conceit. Rather, in humility value others above yourselves.”

– Philippians 2:3

4. Warrior

- The sword burns in your hand. What battles are you called to fight — in your own life, in your family line, in the world around you?

- In life...

- In family...

- In the world...

- In you mind...

- In your heart...

- Name the strongholds that have tried to chain you (fear, addiction, shame, silence, lust, passivity, anger).

- _____
- _____
- _____
- _____
- _____
- _____
- _____

- What does it mean to fight these battles with spiritual weapons instead of your own strength?

- _____

Scripture Anchor:

“Fight the good fight of faith. Take hold of the eternal life to which you were called.”

– 1 Timothy 6:12

5. Spirit-Filled Man

- When Jesus breathed into you, courage filled your lungs. What would it look like to live every day from that place with Holy Spirit strength instead of exhaustion and striving? Describe a scene of you walking in this type of strength.

- ---

- Write a short prayer or declaration you can speak every morning to invite His Spirit to fill you.

- ---

Scripture Anchor:

“Be strong in the Lord and in His mighty power. Put on the full armor of God, so that you can take your stand against the devil’s schemes.”

– Ephesians 6:10–11

Me to Me

I am not the boy hiding in the dark anymore.

I am the man walking out with Jesus.

Every step I take is proof that I am still standing.

Every breath I take is filled with the Spirit of God.

Every lie that once chained me is being broken by truth.

I am a son — fully loved, fully chosen.

I am a brother — a man who shows up and carries weight with others.

I am a leader — not because I'm perfect, but because I refuse to hide.

I am a warrior — armed with truth, strengthened by fire, dangerous to the enemy.

I am Spirit-filled — and I will not live empty again.

I honor the boy inside me.

I carry him with me.

But I am not trapped in the pit with him anymore.

I am climbing.

I am rising.

I am becoming who I was created to be.

I will not turn back.

I will not bow to shame.

I will not silence my voice.

This is my life.

This is my calling.

This is my fight.

And with Jesus beside me,

I will walk it out with courage.

Jesus Speaks: The Restored Man

My son, I see you rising.

Not because you climbed perfectly, but because you kept moving when everything told you to quit.

You carried the boy inside of you.

You carried the weight of generations.

And still — you took another step.

That is courage.

That is strength.

That is who you are.

Do not listen to the voice that says you will always be the broken one.

Do not bow to the lie that says you will fail again.

I have armed you.

I have filled you.

I have set My Spirit within you.

You are not walking out of that pit as the same man who fell into it.

You are walking out as My son,

as a brother who carries others,

as a leader who walks with wisdom,

as a warrior who fights with truth,

as a Spirit-filled man who cannot be shaken.

This climb is not just for you.

It is for every man who will follow.

It is for your family, your brothers, your community, your bloodline.

The curse ends here.

The blessing begins with you.

Keep your eyes on Me.

Keep your feet on the steps.

Keep your sword in your hand.

And know this —

I will not leave you halfway.

I will walk you all the way out.

Guided Prayer: Jesus, Strengthen My Ascent

Jesus,

You found me in the pit.

You carried me when I was broken.

You spoke when I couldn't find words.

And You called me to rise.

I stand here now, not as the boy hiding, but as the man You are restoring.

Step by step, I will climb with You.

I will not turn back.

I will not quit.

Clothe me with Your armor.

Fasten truth to my chest.

Guard my mind with Your wisdom.

Steady my hands with Your shield.

Place Your Word like fire in my grip.

And fill my lungs with the breath of Your Spirit.

Teach me to walk as Your son.

Teach me to show up as a brother.

Teach me to lead with humility and courage.

Teach me to fight with faith, not fear.

Every step I take is Yours.

Every battle I face is Yours.

Every breath I breathe is Yours.

Strengthen me, Jesus.

Build me.

Restore me.

Lead me.

I am Yours.

Amen.

Scripture Meditation: Strength for the Ascent

Joshua 1:9

“Have I not commanded you? Be strong and courageous. Do not be afraid; do not be discouraged, for the Lord your God will be with you wherever you go.”

Ephesians 6:10–11

“Finally, be strong in the Lord and in His mighty power. Put on the full armor of God, so that you can take your stand against the devil’s schemes.”

Isaiah 40:31

“But those who hope in the Lord will renew their strength. They will soar on wings like eagles; they will run and not grow weary, they will walk and not be faint.”

Romans 8:37

“No, in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him who loved us.”

2 Timothy 1:7

“For God has not given us a spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind.”

Joel 2:25

“I will restore to you the years that the swarming locust has eaten.”

PART FIVE: The Leap of Faith

Jesus Speaks: This Is Your Moment

My son, you have climbed out of the depths.

You have fought step by step, brick by brick.

You have shouldered what no one should carry and still you rose.

Now there is a moment that changes everything — not because it is easy, but because it demands a decision.

I will not force you. I will not shove you into the light. I will give you what you need, and then I will ask you to trust Me.

You would not jump from a plane without a parachute — you know that.

Why then would you step into the life I give you without Me strapped to your back?

Real change is not about pretending to be strong.

It is about healing.

Transforming your thoughts.

Renewing your life until it reflects Mine.

To do that, you must forgive.

You must face what cut you open.

You must let Me renew your mind and heart.

This is where true freedom comes — not in hiding, not in performance, but in surrender.

Freedom is not something you earn.

You don't need to work for it.

I already paid for it.

But you do need to face the hurt, or you will repeat the old patterns again and again.

My son, freedom means becoming who I always meant you to be.

Finding your worth in Me, not in the world.

Walking in courage, walking in faith.

This moment is not just about surviving the storm.

It is about stepping into transformation.

Into healing.

Into the man I have called you to be.

But the jump is yours to make.

Courage rises when you choose Me over safety in hiding.

Choose life. Choose Me. Choose to bring every part of you with you.

Guided Visualization: The Parachute

You climb the last step.

Your chest is burning, legs heavy, lungs raw.

You think this is it — daylight, freedom.

But before you can take a breath, the ground shakes.

The stone beneath your boots splits open like it's alive.

The air tears.

And in an instant — the stairwell vanishes.

You are no longer climbing.

You are standing inside a plane.

Metal walls. Deafening engines. Wind ripping through the open hatch.

The boy is gone. Jesus is gone.

It's just you.

Your stomach lurches.

You don't remember putting it on, but the straps of a parachute bite into your shoulders.

It's there, heavy against your back — but you barely notice.

A voice slams against you.

A drill sergeant, square jaw, eyes like fire, standing behind you.

No sympathy. No softness.

"On your feet! Door's open! Time to jump!"

You stagger toward the hatch.

The wind howls in your face.

You look down — and the world is chaos.

Everything you thought you left in the bunker is here.

Flying. Exploding. Spinning like shrapnel in a storm.

Doors you could never open now rip from their hinges and whip through the air.

Boulders roll and smash into each other, breaking apart in midair.

Bricks — thousands of them — the staircase you built with your own pain, detonating like bombs.

And mixed in with the wreckage — memories.

Your father's rage, red and sharp.

Your mother's tears, cold and endless.

The slap of betrayal.

The sting of silence.

The faces that turned away when you needed them.

The lies that split your soul.

The weight of secrets.

All of it alive. All of it circling.

And every time a piece of debris smashes against the fuselage, you don't just see it — you feel it.

The shame. The fear. The rage. The loss.

It tears through you like glass.

Your hands shake.

Your heart slams against your ribs.

Sweat stings your eyes.

The storm below is not just memory — it's everything you've ever tried to outrun, screaming for you to face it.

The sergeant barks again, louder this time:

“JUMP!”

You grip the frame of the door.

Your knuckles are white, nails digging into metal.

The wind pulls at your clothes, trying to rip you out into the storm.

You can taste fear in your mouth.

You can hear your own voice in your head:

I can't. I'll die out there. I'll never survive it.

And then another voice — smaller, steadier.

The one you remember from the stair.

Not shouting. Not demanding.

Just there.

Trust Me. I gave you what you need.

Your hand brushes the straps digging into your chest.

You feel it now. The weight. The parachute.

But the question hangs heavy:

Do you believe it will hold?

Do you believe He will catch you?

Do you believe freedom is worth the fall?

The drill sergeants roar cuts through everything:

“TIME’S UP. JUMP OR STAY STUCK.”

Your throat tightens.

Tears blur your vision.

Every instinct screams to step back, close the hatch, crawl back into the dark where it’s safe.

But you know what that means:

The boy goes back in the bunker.

The chains stay unbroken.

The storm never stops.

Your chest heaves.

Your body shakes.

And the edge of the hatch burns under your grip.

This is it.

One choice.

One step.

One jump.

Checkpoint: The Moment of Decision

Write slowly. Don't rush. Jesus has given you air to think.

1. What do you feel most strongly when you look down — fear, anger, shame, grief, relief, something else?

a. _____

“Cast all your anxiety on him because he cares for you.” – 1 Peter 5:7

2. If the parachute is Jesus' presence and power in your life, what would jumping mean in practical terms for you?

a. _____

“Trust in the Lord with all your heart and lean not on your own understanding.” – Proverbs 3:5

3. What would putting the boy back in the bunker protect you from? What would it cost you and those you lead?

a. _____

“What good is it for someone to gain the whole world, yet forfeit their soul?” – Mark 8:36

4. What would jumping with the parachute look like for the boy inside you? Describe and list.

a. _____

b. _____

“I will never leave you nor forsake you.” – Hebrews 13:5

5. What small first step can you make right now to choose the parachute over the bunker?

a. _____

“Do not merely listen to the word, and so deceive yourselves. Do what it says.” – James 1:22

- a. Flames...

This image shows a blank sheet of white paper with horizontal ruling lines. The lines are evenly spaced and run across the width of the page. There are no margins, text, or other markings on the paper.

- [illegible]

“Forget the former things; do not dwell on the past. See, I am doing a new thing!”
– Isaiah 43:18–19

7. Who do you need beside you when you jump (pastor, brother, counselor, friend)? Name them.

a. _____

b. _____

c. _____

d. _____

e. _____

f. _____

g. _____

“As iron sharpens iron, so one person sharpens another.” – Proverbs 27:17

Me to Me – Rally Verse:

“Be on your guard; stand firm in the faith; be courageous; be strong.” – 1 Corinthians 16:13

Me to Me

This is the moment I’ve been training for.

This is the moment courage meets choice.

I will not put the boy back in the dark out of cowardice.

I will not let shame keep me from life.

I strap the parachute Jesus gave me.

I will jump.

Not into chaos without protection — but into healing with Him on my back.

I will not protect my comfort at the expense of my son.

I will not trade freedom for hiding.

This is the moment I choose to live the life I was made for — fully, loudly, with scars that tell the story of rescue.

If I fall, I fall with Him. If I heal, I heal with Him.

Either way, I refuse to go back down.

I chose to jump. I chose the rescue. I chose life.

Jesus Speaks: I Give You My Hands — Jump

My son, I will not be on the plane in front of you — because I am the parachute strapped to your back.

I have given you My Spirit, My Word, My presence. I have slipped the straps over your shoulders. I have not left you naked to the wind.

I will not force you to jump. That would not be faith.

But I will tell you this: I am with you as you fall.

I will catch you when you stumble. I will open what you keep closed. I will turn the storm into a river that cleanses and carries.

Do not let fear speak louder than My promise.

Do not let shame dictate your horizon.

The boy in you is not safer buried. He will live when you bring him with you.

So jump. Trust Me. Let Me be what I am for you — not a last resort, but your first line, your parachute, your lifeline.

Guided Prayer: Jesus, I Jump With You

Jesus,

I feel how loud the wind is.

I see the memories circling.

I feel the pull of fear and the weight of choice.

You gave me a parachute — Your Spirit, Your promises, Your presence.

I strap it on now. I feel the straps across my chest.

Strengthen my legs. Still my hands. Calm my breath.

I will not put the boy back into the dark to keep myself safe.

I will not trade Your life for a temporary comfort.

Help me jump with faith — not reckless, but sure because You are on my back.

If I fall, catch me.

If the storm comes, teach me to breathe through it.

If the memories flood, make them a river that cleanses and not a current that drowns.

I choose You. I choose the jump. I choose to bring every part of me out of the bunker and into life.

Amen.

Scripture Meditation: Courage to Jump

Hebrews 11:1

“Now faith is confidence in what we hope for and assurance about what we do not see.”

2 Timothy 1:7

“For God has not given us a spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind.”

Psalms 18:2

“The Lord is my rock, my fortress and my deliverer; my God is my rock, in whom I take refuge.”

Isaiah 43:2

“When you pass through the waters, I will be with you; and when you pass through the rivers, they will not overflow you.”

Romans 8:31

“If God is for us, who can be against us?”

PART SIX: The Meadow

Jesus Speaks: Healing Begins Here

My son, the storm is not the end.

The fall is not your failure.

It is the doorway into freedom.

You think you're crashing into chaos, but you are landing in holy ground.

This place inside you — scarred, gray, broken — is where I live.

It may not look like peace yet.

But it is sacred.

It is Mine.

Healing doesn't happen by running from pain.

It happens when you face it with Me.

The doors you locked away, the boulders you buried, the memories you thought would crush you — they are not stronger than My Spirit.

But they must be brought into the light.

Nothing hidden can stay hidden.

Everything hidden becomes a weapon in the enemy's hands.

So I will walk you back to every door.

We will open them together.

Not to shame you. Not to destroy you.

But to heal you.

This is where your mind is renewed.

This is where forgiveness sets you free.

This is where transformation begins.

Freedom is not pretending the storm never happened.

Freedom is letting Me turn the storm into life.

This meadow will bloom.

The stream will widen.

And you will become who I have always called you to be — whole, rooted, unshaken, Mine.

Guided Visualization: The Jump Into the Meadow

You step out of the plane.

The wind grabs you like a fist.

For a moment, you're weightless — then you're falling.

Fast. Violent. Unstoppable.

The storm tears at you.

Shards of memory rip past — the slammed doors, the raised voices, the abandonment, the lies, the shame.

Boulders tumble around you like meteors.

Bricks explode beside you, shards cutting through the air.

It feels like you're plummeting straight into the heart of everything you've feared.

You can't breathe.

The wind shreds your lungs.

Your body spins out of control.

The storm screams louder than thought.

Then instinct kicks in.

Your hand grabs the cord.

You pull.

The chute yanks open.

Your body jerks.

And suddenly... everything slows.

The storm is still raging — but you're not falling through it at the same speed anymore.

You float.

You watch.

You see.

And as you drift, your eyes begin to catch details you missed before.

The locked doors.

They're suspended in the air like fragments of stone — some cracked, some sealed tight.

You know them.

Not with your mind, but with your soul.

They are the places you swore you would never revisit.

The nights you buried.

The wounds you shoved down so deep you almost forgot.

But here they are.

Every locked door whispers the same thing:

Nothing hidden can stay hidden.

You realize it now — anything left in the dark becomes a weapon in Satan's hands.

The things you bury don't die.

They wait.

And you can't outrun them anymore.

You float past the doors.

Past the boulders carved with old grief.

Past the broken blueprints of your family line.

And you know:

These must be faced.

One door at a time.

One boulder at a time.

Because healing doesn't come by avoiding.

It comes by opening.

It comes by surrendering.

The ground rises to meet you.

You brace for impact — but instead of crashing, you land softly.

Your knees bend.

Your feet hit soil.

You're standing.

You look around.

You're in a field.

But it's not what you expect.

Not bright. Not beautiful. Not yet.

The grass is patchy.

The sky gray.

The earth scarred with debris from the storm — broken doors, shattered bricks, splintered boulders.

Every wound you've carried has landed here with you.

You don't know it yet... but this is the meadow.

The place inside you where the Holy Spirit dwells.

Where Jesus lives.

Where healing begins.

This is holy ground.

You notice a stream, thin and quiet, weaving through the wreckage.

It glimmers faintly.

Not much — just a trickle of water.

But something in you knows: this stream is alive.

It is the Spirit, running even here.

And if you follow it, it will lead you.

You take a step toward the stream.

The first step is heavy.

But you know — this is the path forward.

One locked door at a time.

One boulder at a time.

One memory at a time.

Until the meadow begins to change.

Checkpoint: Facing the Hidden

1. What doors in your life do you know are locked?

- a. _____

“There is nothing concealed that will not be disclosed, or hidden that will not be made known.” – Luke 12:2

2. What fears keep you from opening them?

- a. _____
b. _____
c. _____
d. _____
e. _____

“For God has not given us a spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind.” – 2 Timothy 1:7

3. How have hidden wounds given the enemy power in your life?

- a. _____

“The thief comes only to steal and kill and destroy; I have come that they may have life, and have it to the full.” – John 10:10

4. Which boulders — heavy, immovable pains — have defined your path?

- a. _____

“Cast your burden on the Lord, and He will sustain you.” – Psalm 55:22

5. What would it look like to bring those doors and boulders into the light with Jesus?

- a. _____

“But everything exposed by the light becomes visible — and everything that is illuminated becomes a light.” – Ephesians 5:13

6. What part of you still wants to keep the meadow gray and untouched — and why?

“Why are you cast down, O my soul, and why are you in turmoil within me? Hope in God.” – Psalm 42:11

7. What would freedom feel like if the meadow began to bloom?

- a. _____

“So if the Son sets you free, you will be free indeed.” – John 8:36

Me to Me – Rally Verse:

“He who began a good work in you will carry it on to completion until the day of Christ Jesus.” –
Philippians 1:6

Me to Me

I cannot heal what I refuse to face.

I cannot be free if I stay hidden.

The storm didn't destroy me — it showed me what I've been running from.

The meadow is not dead ground.

It is holy ground.

And I will not waste it.

I will face the doors.

I will lift the boulders.

I will bring every locked, hidden, buried thing into the light.

Because freedom is not pretending the pain never happened.

Freedom is walking with Jesus through every wound until it heals.

I am not afraid of the dark anymore.

I am not afraid of the storm.

This is where healing begins.

Jesus Speaks: This Place Is Holy

My son, this is not wasteland.

This is holy ground.

I live here — in the very place you thought was too broken for Me.

Every door will open in My time.

Every boulder will move by My hand.

Every scar will be redeemed.

You are not doing this alone.

The Spirit is the stream that runs even here.

Follow it. Trust it.

It will not run dry.

As you face the past, I will be beside you.

As you open the doors, I will steady you.

As you lift the boulders, I will give you strength.

This meadow will not stay gray.

It will bloom.

It will become the place where you find rest, healing, and life.

You are not defined by the storm.

You are defined by My Spirit.

And I will make all things new.

Guided Prayer: Jesus, Walk Me Through the Meadow

Jesus,

This ground feels heavy.

The debris is everywhere.

The doors are locked, the boulders unmoved.

But You are here.

And if You are here, then this is holy ground.

Give me courage to follow the stream of Your Spirit.

Show me which door to open first.

Show me which boulder to face.

Teach me not to run, but to walk with You.

Let this meadow become the place of my healing.

Let what was gray begin to bloom.

Let the hidden become whole.

And let me see that nothing is stronger than Your presence.

Amen.

Scripture Meditation: Light in the Meadow

John 8:12

"I am the light of the world. Whoever follows me will never walk in darkness, but will have the light of life."

Romans 12:2

"Do not conform to the pattern of this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind."

Ezekiel 36:26

"I will give you a new heart and put a new spirit in you; I will remove from you your heart of stone and give you a heart of flesh."

Psalms 23:2–3

"He makes me lie down in green pastures, he leads me beside quiet waters, he refreshes my soul."

Revelation 21:5

"He who was seated on the throne said, 'I am making everything new!'"

PART SEVEN: The Door of Healing

Jesus Speaks: Nothing Hidden Stays Hidden

My son, the enemy has lied to you long enough.

He told you the doors were safer locked.

That if you never looked back, you could move forward.

But you've seen the truth — nothing hidden stays hidden.

Every wound kept in the dark becomes a weapon in Satan's hands.

But every wound brought into My light becomes a place of healing.

You don't need to be afraid of what's behind the doors.

I was there when it happened.

I never left.

And I am here now to walk you through.

The boy in you — the one who carried what you could not — does not need to hide anymore.

Together, you will face the past.

Together, you will forgive.

And together, you will become whole.

This door will not destroy you.

It will free you.

Guided Visualization: The Door of Healing

You stand before the door.

It's chained. Heavy. Breathing with shadows.

Every part of you wants to turn away.

To pretend it's not there.

But you know — this is your door.

Your pain.

Your memory.

The one you swore you'd never look at again.

Your younger self is crouched beside it.

Small. Shaking. His face streaked with dirt and tears.

He clings to your arm. His voice cracks as he whispers:

"Please... don't make me go in there."

Jesus lays His hand on both of you.

His voice is steady.

"You are not alone. We open this together."

Your stomach knots.

Your palms sweat.

You can hear the echoes on the other side — the yelling, the silence, the betrayal, the rejection.

Every voice that marked you.

Every wound that shaped you.

Jesus places your hand and your younger self's hand on the lock.

Light pulses under your skin.

The chains rattle.

The door groans.

And with a crack, it swings open.

The weight of it hits you.

Not vague — real.

The memory surges forward like smoke:

- The voice that said you weren't enough.
- The face that turned away when you needed love.
- The betrayal that split you open.
- The silence that made you believe no one cared.
- The moment you decided, "I'll never cry again."

Your knees want to buckle.

Your chest aches like it's splitting in two.

Shame hisses: "It's your fault. You're broken. You'll never change."

Your younger self sobs, folding in on himself.

You want to pull him away, slam the door shut.

But Jesus won't let you.

He lifts your chin with His hand. His eyes burn with fire.

"It's time. Forgive them. Release them. Not because it was right. Not because it didn't hurt. But because it's not your weight anymore. Give it to Me."

Your throat tightens.

Everything in you resists.

But slowly, painfully, you whisper:

"I forgive them."

Your younger self echoes, barely audible:

"I forgive them too."

The chains snap.

The smoke thins.

Then Jesus' eyes lock on yours.

Sharper. Fiercer.

"Now forgive yourself."

The words hit harder than the memory.

You shake your head.

"I can't. I failed. I should've been stronger. I ruined it."

But His voice doesn't break.

"Forgive yourself. My cross was enough for you too."

Tears blur your vision.

Your body shakes.

And with a cry you can't hold back anymore, you whisper:

"I forgive myself."

Something lifts.

The lie loses its grip.

The weight cracks open.

And then Jesus moves.

Not with judgment.

With power.

With truth.

He sweeps through the room like fire — but fire that heals, not burns.

Every lie etched into the walls — “Worthless. Unloved. Broken. Too much.” — disintegrates in the blaze.

And in their place, truth blazes bright:

“You are My son.”

“You are forgiven.”

“You are chosen.”

“You are free.”

Your younger self lifts his head.

His tears slow.

His breathing steadies.

He places his hands on the truth carved into the walls, and as he accepts it, his body begins to change.

He stretches.

He grows.

From a child to a boy.

From a boy to a young man.

His shoulders square. His eyes clear. His frame steady.

And then — the unthinkable.

Jesus wraps His arms around both of you.

And as He does, your younger self begins to merge into you.

Not lost. Not erased.

Integrated. Whole.

You feel him inside you now.

The boy you abandoned. The son you thought was broken.

He is no longer hidden.

He is part of you again.

And Jesus whispers into the core of your being:

“What was once broken is now whole. You are Mine.”

Checkpoint: Facing the Door

1. What memories or moments feel like they're behind your first door?

- a. _____

“There is nothing concealed that will not be disclosed, or hidden that will not be made known.” – Luke 12:2

2. Who do you need to forgive so you can lay down the weight of the door?

- a. _____

“Bear with each other and forgive one another if any of you has a grievance against someone. Forgive as the Lord forgave you.” – Colossians 3:13

3. What lies have those wounds whispered into your soul?

a. _____

“When he lies, he speaks his native language, for he is a liar and the father of lies.” – John 8:44

4. What truth does Jesus speak over you to replace those lies?

a. _____

“You are all sons of God through faith in Christ Jesus.” – Galatians 3:26

“You are a chosen people, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, God’s special possession.” – 1 Peter 2:9

5. What keeps you from forgiving yourself? What accusation do you still believe?

a. _____

“Therefore, there is now no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus.” – Romans 8:1

6. What changes when you whisper the words, 'I forgive myself' — even if it feels fragile?

a. _____

"He has removed our sins as far from us as the east is from the west." – Psalm 103:12

7. What part of your younger self do you feel beginning to heal as you accept the truth?

a. _____

"I will restore to you the years that the locust has eaten." – Joel 2:25

Me to Me

I faced the door.

I felt the weight.

I forgave.

I forgive those who hurt me.

I forgive myself.

I release the lies.

I am not broken beyond repair.

I am not abandoned.

I am not worthless.

I am not too much.

I am forgiven.

I am chosen.

I am free.

My younger self is no longer hidden.

He belongs with me.

We are one.

We are whole.

This healing is not the end — it is the beginning.

Every door will open.

Every wound will heal.

Because I will not hide anymore.

I will walk with Jesus through every shadow until only truth remains.

Rally Verse

“Therefore, if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation; the old has gone, the new is here!” – 2 Corinthians 5:17

Jesus Speaks: You Are Whole in Me

My son, the enemy cannot define you anymore.

The lies are broken.

The shame has no voice.

The boy in you is no longer abandoned.

He is restored. He is one with you.

Do not be afraid of the doors still ahead.

The first was the heaviest.

And I was with you in it.

I will be with you in every one that remains.

You are no longer fractured.

You are no longer two.

You are one.

You are Mine.

Guided Prayer: Jesus, Make Me Whole

Jesus, I stood at the door I swore I'd never face.

I felt the weight, but You stood with me.

I forgave.

I forgave myself.

And You replaced every lie with truth.

You took my broken pieces and made me whole.

You restored the son I thought I lost.

You made us one again.

I am forgiven.

I am chosen.

I am free.

Walk me through the doors still ahead.

Stay by my side.

Teach me to live whole — no longer fractured, but fully Yours.

Amen.

Scripture Meditation: Wholeness in Christ

Romans 8:15

“The Spirit you received does not make you slaves, so that you live in fear again; rather, the Spirit you received brought about your adoption to sonship. And by him we cry, ‘Abba, Father.’”

Ezekiel 36:26

“I will give you a new heart and put a new spirit in you; I will remove from you your heart of stone and give you a heart of flesh.”

John 8:36

“So if the Son sets you free, you will be free indeed.”

2 Corinthians 3:17

“Now the Lord is the Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom.”

Philippians 1:6

“He who began a good work in you will carry it on to completion until the day of Christ Jesus.”

